

Pat Walsh BBS LLM DipArb

Pat Walsh holds a Masters Degree in European Law (LLM) and has a specific in-depth knowledge of European Law in the area of data protection.

The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) has become one of the most important pieces of legislation in the area of data protection to come from the E.U. in recent years and had impacted on every organisation in Ireland where personal data is stored and or processed.

Pat has been involved in advising organisations regarding the legal requirements under GDPR and how to become compliant. This entails identifying data protection weak spots and designing and implementing a compliance strategy.

Pat can also act as Data Protection Officer where organisations choose to outsource this role. Pat also holds a Business Degree from U.C.D. and lectures part-time in Business Management. Pat's comprehensive knowledge of the business sector, coupled with his qualifications in European law, has ideally positioned him to advise and guide organisations regarding data protection.

Pat also holds a Professional Diploma in Arbitration Law from the U.C.D School of Law and has been involved in dispute resolution as well as acting as mediator in internal disputes involving individuals, limited companies and partnerships. Pat uses his considerable experience as a mediator/negotiator to lead both management and staff down the road of full data protection compliance.
